OUTREACH INITIATIVES

WPUC-FM has at least three students per academic semester who work at the station. Students assist the station’s employees in a variety of areas, including production, marketing, programming, traffic, and administration (accounting assistant, secretarial and management). Students working at WPUC-FM are trained and closely supervised by the station’s full time employees.

Some students are a part of the University’s professional internship program, which provides real world experience to students majoring in Radio Communications, Marketing, Management, Finance or Accounting during their last semester before graduation. These students earn academic credit by interning at WPUC-FM for a minimum of 195 hours over the course of the semester. WPUC-FM also participates in the University’s work study program. Through this program, undergraduate students majoring in Radio Communications have the opportunity to work at WPUC-FM, while being paid an hourly wage by the University’s Financial Aid Office in order to assist them with their expenses while attending college. Work-study students typically work 30 hours per month in addition to completing their studies.
